

Help end cancer as we know it, for everyone.

The American Cancer Society Road To Recovery program provides people with cancer free rides to medical appointments and treatment.

Lack of transportation can be one of the greatest barriers to receiving timely treatment and quality cancer care. Millions of Americans delay or have difficulty getting needed medical care each year due to the lack of available and affordable transportation to treatment.

Family and friends may help, but over the course of several months, they may not always have the time or resources to provide every ride. That's why a successful transportation assistance program can be a tremendous asset, and that's why it's critical for your company or organization to play a role in helping improve the lives of people facing cancer and their families.

The Road To Recovery program removes barriers to cancer treatment by providing people facing cancer with transportation to treatment and medical appointments.*

Our volunteer drivers donate their time and the use of their personal vehicles to give people with cancer free rides to treatment.

While the program is provided at no cost to people facing cancer, it does require funding to support technology solutions and other program management costs.

*Currently drivers and passengers are required to wear masks as a precaution against COVID-19.

Working with the American Cancer Society, you can help:

- Patients have fewer barriers to completing their treatment and receiving follow-up care, resulting in the best possible outcome and lower long-term costs to your company or organization.
- Patients feel more fully supported and empowered by a company or organization that helps them overcome challenges faced during and after treatment.
- Patients reduce time spent navigating transportation resources.

To learn more about our transportation programs, visit cancer.org/roadtorecovery or call 1-800-227-2345.

Road To Recovery®